NEW GOODS, Cheap for Cash, and Cash only.

CHARLES E. WOSS
I am receiving and opening a large and choice stock of FALL AND WINTER GOODS, purchased entirely for Cash, and which he will sell for cash—and only for cash—at very reduced prices. He feels certain that from the favorable terms upon which he purchased his Goods, that he is able, and he is determined to sell goods lower for the money than any other House in the place. His stock embraces a variety of Goods, usually found in Stores in this section of country—such as

STAPLE & FANCY GOODS,
Hardware, Cutlery, GROCERIES, HATS, BONNETS, SHOES & BOOTS, QUEENSWARE, Bagging and Roping,
And every other article usually called for. His STOCK OF

NEGRO SHOES, Blankets & Hats

is very large, and will be sold cheaper than they can be purchased elsewhere in this section of Charlotte. Parolees are invited to call and examine for themselves, with the assurance that they shall have bargains, if they desire them.
Charlotte, Oct. 31, 1845.

Magical Pain Extractor.
REDUCTION FOURFOLD IN PRICES—
No matter if the user is not delighted with it. An article that every family must consider indispensable, when they know its power and value, and which has heretofore been sold too high to reach all classes, has now been reduced fourfold in price, and in fact every human being may enjoy its comforts; and all who get it will have the price returned to them if they are not delighted with its use. We assert, without the possibility of contradiction, that all Burns or Scalds, erysipelas, Rheumatism, old or fresh, and all external pains and aches, no matter where, shall be reduced to comfort by it in five minutes—saving life, limb or sense. No burn can be fatal if this is applied, unless the vital is destroyed by the accident. It is truly magical, to appearance, in its effects. Enquire for "Connell's Magical Pain Extractor," at Comstock & Co.'s 21 Cortland Street. Price 25 cents, or four times as much for 50 cents, and ten times as much for $1.

All country merchants are requested to take it to their towns on commission, as the greatest benefit to mankind that has been discovered in medicine for ages. This is strong language, but you may depend on the power will justify it. Sold at 21 Cortland Street, where it can be found genuine in New York City.

CAUTION.—Be sure you get Connell's, as our plate with Dalley's name on it has been stolen, and counterfeit and worthless stuff may appear under that name. See that it is direct from Comstock & Co., or never touch it. For sale at the Charlotte Drug Store by B. Oates.

of all kinds, should the demand warrant it.

As he intends to sell entirely for cash his articles are offered to the public at the lowest rates. He hopes the friends will give him a call. Mrs. Baine will be attending to the sale of them.

The subscriber hopes by affording his articles, which are of the best quality, low for cash, to merit a share of public patronage.

CHARLOTTE FEMALE ACADEMY.

THE Trustees of this Academy, with great pleasure, announce to the public, that they have secured the services of the Rev. Cyrus Johnson, A. M., as Principal of the Institution.

By reason of his peculiar method of instruction and success in government, Mr. Johnson is favorably known in the upper Districts of South Carolina, as well as in this State, as among the most diligent, accurate and successful instructors of youth. Accuracy is the prominent trait of his character as a Teacher. His qualifications are undoubted, and he has the experience of many years in the business of teaching. Parents and Guardians may safely confide their daughters and sons to his care.

He will devote much of his own time to the instruction of the various classes in the higher sciences; and will be aided by a sufficient number of well-qualified assistants; and, with the counsel and advice of the Trustees, he will have the entire direction and control of the Institution.

Young ladies only here receive an education liberal and unaccompanied, and which will honorably compare with that to be obtained in the best Female Institutions of the State.

The School in Year will consist of about two months, and will be divided into two sessions, the first to commence on the Second Monday of October and close on the last Thursday of February; and the second to commence on the first Monday of March and close on the last Thursday of July.

The course of Studies and rates of Tuition and Board will be sent to all those of other Institutions of the kind in this region of country.

The Trustees are prepared to take a number of Ladies as boarders, and will be ready to receive them at any time.

WM. DAVIDSON, JOHN EDWIN, J. H. WILSON, H. B. WILLIAMS, R. OATES, LEROY SPRINGS, TRUSTEES.

Charlotte, Mecklenburg County, N. C., 431, Sept. 8, 1845.

$20 Reward.

RUNAWAY from the subscriber, a white male named JERRY, he is about 5 feet 10 inches high, about 30 years old, yellow complexion, and has a very wild look. He had on when he left me a blue colored pair of linen pantaloons. I will give a reward of TWENTY DOLLARS to any person who will apprehend said boy and deliver him to me, or lodge him in jail or I can get him again. Letters addressed to Herrington's Store, Mecklenburg County, N. C., will meet prompt attention.

JOHN W. POTTS.

NOTICE.

TO OWNERS OF SLVES.

THOSE having Gold upon their lands in virtue of surface or deposit mines, which they have explored, would do well to give the subscribers a call or notice, post paid, at Gold Hill, Rowan Co., N. C., as we wish to leave and operate more extensively in the Mining Business. Good Miners will be despatched immediately to examine and test such mines as may be offered; but in no case will lands be examined without the privilege of leasing, and no lease taken for a shorter term than three years. As persons often obtain leases with an intention of operating sufficiently to test upon the premises to the prejudice of both lessor and those really desirous of thoroughly exploring them the subscribers would say, that whenever they lease they will fairly test the mines.

POETRY.

LOVE NEVER SLEEPS.

Love never sleeps!—This mother's eye Bends o'er her dying infant's bed; And as she marks the moments fly, While death creeps on with noiseless tread, Faint and distressed, she sits and weeps, With beating heart!—Love never sleeps.

Yet when that sad and fragile form Forgets the tumult of her breast; Despite the horrors of the storm, Overburdened nature sinks to rest. But over them another keeps——Night watch!—Love never sleeps.

Stoop o'er the couch and hands With pitying eyes and eager hands; They raise the soul to hope again, Like as the air their jolly sweeps. The storm of time!—Love never sleeps.

And round—beneath—and over all, Over men and angels, earth and heaven, A higher bend! the slightest call Is answered, and relief is given. In hours of war, when narrow steps The heart in pain!—HE never sleeps.

Oh! God of Love! thy eyes to those Tired of the world's false radiance, turn; And as we view thy purity, We feel our hearts within us burn; Convinced that in the lowest depths Of human ill—Love never sleeps.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Cincinnati Mirror.

GERTRUDE BEVERLY.

BY MISS JULIA L. DUNFEE.

—Is this my own reflection? Pray tell me, is this the first true mirror I have looked in?

Gertrude Beverly, an orphan and an heiress, had grown up with all the manifold privileges and immunities, to which an heiress has prescriptive rights; "a charter large as the winds," withal, to enact what ever part she chose, of folly or wisdom.

An invitation from the Ellisons, an amiable and quiet family, in a quiet village some two days' journey from her native city, and the sudden caprice of the moment, determined her to spend with them the two remaining months of her minority. Though very distant, they were her nearest surviving relatives, and therefore had some claim upon her attention.

A creature of fashionable fantasies, gay, volatile, vain, and conscious of power, dressed in the extreme of fashionable elegance, and seeming to regard life rather as a pageant than a mere every day concern, she arrived at the next and secluded mansion. "I shall not like her," thought Mrs. Ellison as she ushered her into her snug little parlor; but Mrs. Ellison was mistaken. "How terribly proud she must be," thought the sober though kind-hearted matron, as she stood waiting the unlooked and unbidden of her guest; but this idea also was of but transient dominance. Miss Beverly's eyes—Mrs. Ellison could not exactly tell whether they were blue or black—were lifted to her face; and how very beautiful, was the next thought that succeeded. It forced itself, indeed, into almost audible utterance, as the clustering locks of golden brown were thrown back from her bright forehead like a flood of sunlight, and her countenance, beaming with open trust and sunny emotions, was turned fully towards her censor.

But she is shocking giddy, and the imposing shake of the head which next followed, as Gertrude, upon whom her new position seemed to have imposed as little check as the transfer from one tree to another does upon the glad notes of the forest bird, ran on from one theme of trifling to another in rapid succession—still her new friends listened, and Gertrude still ran on; and by degrees, they forgot to remember, that wisdom was no philosopher more proper than folly. Her smile was so bright, it pervaded every little corner of the heart; her merry laugh came over one like a sound of springs, and her voice, soft, rich, and full of musical intonation, was a continuous tide of melody.

I am afraid, my dear, you will be sadly lost in so very retired a place as this, said Mrs. Ellison, as the day wore away; but the teacher of the female seminary here, an amiable and highly accomplished girl, is at this time our boarder, and you will find in her a gifted and agreeable companion.

Some demure old maid, I suppose, thought Miss Beverly; and still worse, a blue stocking. Good angels defend me if—Miss Hartland, Miss Beverly, interrupted Mrs. Ellison, as a young woman apparently scarcely eighteen, with a pale, mild countenance of singular beauty, at that moment entered. I hope, my dear young ladies, you will soon be friends. If not equally unfortunate, you are both orphans, and this should be a link of sympathy between you.

Is that the young woman you spoke of, my dear Mrs. Ellison? exclaimed Gertrude the moment that Miss Hartland left the room; why you told me—not exactly told me; but I had an idea that she was so very different; she is so young, and so extremely lovely. Gladly would I cultivate her friendship; but methinks, I should know as little how to speak to her as to a beautiful engraving.

You will find a far deeper interest in the character of Eliza Hartland, than mere beauty can afford. She has been reared in all the elegancies of wealth and high fashion; but the death of her parents, while it revealed the ruin that had been gradually settling upon their fortune, threw her at the age of fifteen upon the single support of a young brother, whose education was yet unfinished, and who had scarcely given a thought to any pursuit of life, but the legitimate studies from which he was then so unexpectedly called. But a noble fellow with a self sustained spirit, that could bend itself to the exigencies of life, though it could not be bowed to dependence or dependency. The creditors of his father were disposed to be lenient in behalf of the unprovided orphans; but far from seeking, he would admit of no commutation, and the minutest article of the estate, even those which had been already appropriated to himself and sister, were finally disposed of, that not a farthing should be left unpaid.—This rigid justice was not without its effect. His character was at once firmly based; and on employment in an extensive mercantile establishment, enabled him at once to continue his sister at the fashionable school where she had been placed by her parents. But Eliza shared his own proud virtues. She knew her brother still cherished a strong preference for the profession and that she had been originally destined, he might yet strive to provide for, forward to the time when her education would secure her support, and with an untiring industry that could not fail of attaining its object, she strove to perfect herself in those branches of female accomplishment which she now regarded, not as mere embellishments, but as attainments positively enforced by gratitude and duty. Her native gentleness of manners, and elevation of character, were favorable to her purpose; and it is more than a year since she has been the principal teacher in the young ladies' seminary of this place. Her brother has devoted himself to his favorite profession, and is at this time attending a course of law lectures in your own city.

Quite a tale of romance, said Miss Beverly; and truly Miss Hartland's countenance is in fine keeping with the character of a heroine; with that calm, pure brow of hers, and eyes that when you look into them, you feel as if looking down into deep waters when the moon is shining on them. Oh, I know we shall be friends. You know, my dear madam, there was never a heroine without some dear, dear friends to act as a foil; and I have just come to take that place. How very fortunate! We shall love one another so entirely.

But Miss Beverly was also mistaken.—Eliza Hartland's manner towards her was from the first as gentle as a sister's; and it would have been difficult to define the kind of distance it still preserved. There was nothing in it of avoidance or coldness; and yet there was an impassable something that drew around her a line like a magic circle, over which no advance of familiarity might be urged. Her faculties were at all times called into the readiest requisition, to oblige Miss Beverly. She sang for her—played for her—sketched for her—drew patterns for her—assisted at her toilette, and all this with the most perfect pleasure; but here her intelligence stopped; and Gertrude, who had planned unbounded munificence towards the indigent orphan, found it impossible to make any return for her daily acts of kindness. Eliza had no wants—no desires—no fancies—no sorrows to communicate—no lost privileges to regret. If Gertrude sometimes tossed over the elegant baubles and costly ornaments which form so large a part of female expenditure to find some offering for her friend—when she had made selection, Eliza had quietly withdrawn. If when an occasional shade upon Eliza's brow told of remembered grief or the weariness of unremitting exertion, she would have proffered sympathy, the shade was thrown off as soon as noted, and succeeded by a smile of placid sweetness.

She is a strange girl, thought Gertrude Beverly; can all this be pride? Pride! under that meek and gentle bearing!—the idea was preposterous. Has she no heart? A thousand instances, even the expression of her countenance at that moment, gave answer; for she was speaking of her brother's expected return, and there was a new and animated light in her calm eye.

And is this brother of yours, whose promised coming has given so rich a tint to your cheek, is he much like you, Eliza?
